SRRB pleased with Minister's support for community-based caribou conservation in the Sahtú

February 27, 2017, Tulita, NWT – The ᑕᑦᑲᑦᑲᑦ ᑕᑦᑲᑦᑲᑦ ᑕᑦᑲᑦᑲᑦ (Sahtú Renewable Resources Board, or SRRB) is pleased with the final decisions of Environment and Natural Resources Minister Robert C. McLeod concerning Bluenose East ᑕᑦᑲᑦᑲᑦ (caribou) in the Sahtú. The Minister is responding to the SRRB's final decisions following from the Sahtú Bluenose East ᑕᑦᑲᑦᑲᑦ Hearing in Délı̨ᑎᑦ last March.

Minister McLeod supports the SRRB's decisions in favour of a community conservation planning model for ᑕᑦᑲᑦᑲᑦ stewardship in the Sahtú. In his letter dated February 22, 2017, the Minister accepts the harvest proposed by the community of Délı̨ᑎᑦ and the spirit and intent of the community conservation planning process.

"The SRRB is encouraged by the Minister's acceptance of community-based approaches to conservation in the Sahtú and his recognition that important innovations in conservation can be achieved through a co-management model that respects regional differences," says Paul Latour, former vice-chair of the SRRB and now special advisor to the board.

The Minister had previously asked that the harvest of 150 ᑕᑦᑲᑦᑲᑦ proposed in Délı̨ᑎᑦ's conservation plan be lowered to 129, to be consistent with determinations put forth by the Wek'èezhìi Renewable Resources Board (WRRB) for their region following their own hearings on Bluenose East ᑕᑦᑲᑦᑲᑦ management. The Minister now accepts the harvest proposed by Délı̨ᑎᑦ.

The Minister has also agreed to support Délı̨ᑎᑦ's plan for a majority yárégo (smaller male) harvest with a small ceremonial tsída (female) harvest, despite the original GNWT proposal for a 100 percent bull harvest.

"The SRRB believes that there must be collaboration among regions and respect for varying regional needs," Latour says. "We are pleased to see the Minister accepting regional differences in approaches to conservation that will achieve shared goals."

The SRRB looks forward to continuing its conversation with the Government of the Northwest Territories around changes to regulations that will be required to reflect the final decisions of the Minister in support of community conservation planning.
